18. William Tyndale (494–1536), an English Lutheran who translated the Bible into English in 1506, defended Protestantism thus:

'In this they be all agreed, to drive you from the knowledge of the scripture, and that ye shall not have the text thereof in the mother-tongue, and to keep the world still in darkness, to the intent they might sit in the conscience of the people, through vain superstition and false doctrine, to satisfy their proud ambition, and insatiable covetousness, and to exalt their own honour above king and emperor, yea and above Good himself... .. Which thing only moved me to translate the New Testament. Because I have perceived by experience, how that it was impossible to establish the lay-people in any truth, except the scripture were plainly laid before their eyes in their mother tongue, that they might see the process, order, and meaning of the text'.

19. It is interesting to note that another writer, Washington Irving, much younger than Wordsworth who had actually met native people, described them quite differently." The Indians I have had an opportunity of seeing in real life are quite different from those describe in poetry... .. Taciturn they are, it is true, when in company with white man, whose good will they distrust and whose language the do not understand; but the White man is equally taciturn under like circumstances, when the Indian are among themselves, they are great mimics, and ventertain themselves excessively at the expense of whites.....who have supposed them impressed with profound respect for their grandeur and dignity... ..

The white man (as I have witnessed) are prone to treat the poor Indians as little better than animals. '

A. Who is the author of this passage? How did describe a native?
